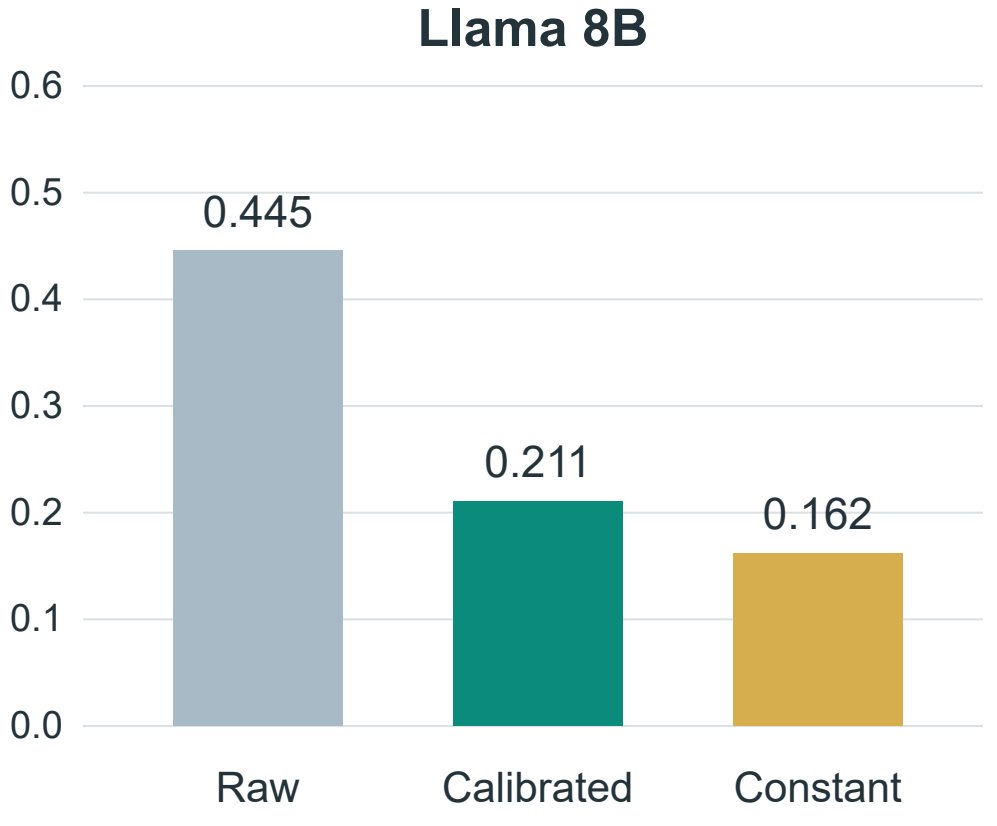
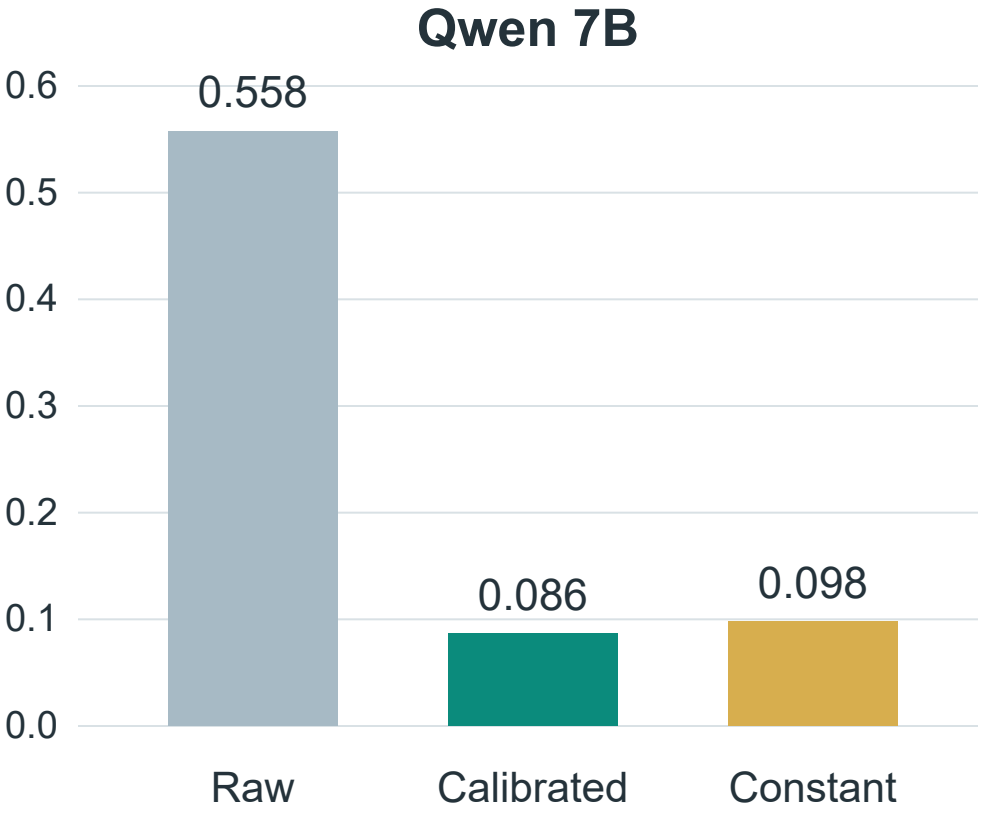
Confidence scoring: raw, calibrated and constant

Token-based signal on the original 74 test cases; lower Brier score is better





The constant score is the cheap model's validation correctness rate, applied to every test case.
It is a scoring baseline, not a way to identify which individual cases need escalation.